SCHOOL OFFICERS have a specific duty to perform as such, and school boards "to visit the schools under their care, examine into their condition, and the progress of the pupils, advise and consult with the teachers, and to exercise such supervision as will best promote the interests of the schools."

PARENTS AND PATRONS should also visit the schools and by their presence and encouragement lend inspiration to both pupils and teacher. In fact it is your imperative duty-one that you owe not only to the children but the community in which you live-to keep your children in school, acquaint vourselves with their progress, and if the teacher has not done his duty hold him resdonsible. should endeavor to make themselves acquainted with parents and guardians, in order to secure their aid and co-operation, and to better understand the temperaments, characteristics, and wants of the children. They should carefully prepare themselves for each day's work, and earnestly endeavor to arouse and fix the attention of their pupupils by exhibiting proper animation themselves, manifesting a lively interest in the subject taught; avoiding all formal routine in teaching, lest the pupils become dull and drowsy, and imbibe the notion that they study only to recite.
